

The following list of US cities and towns have a common property that no other US city or town can claim. Can you figure out what that property is?

Alamosa, CO	Alma, CO	Chicago, IL
Colorado Springs, CO	Denver, CO	El Paso, TX
Laramie, WY	Leadville, CO	Los Alamos, NM
Los Angeles, CA	Mammoth Lakes, CA	New York City, NY
Phoenix, AZ	Santa Fe, NM	Woodland Park, CO

Some Notes:

- I first noticed that Los Alamos had this property when I decided to move there in 1995. After a few minute's thought I realized that the complete list would be rather short.
- This list can be considered to be complete. But, it is possible that I have missed a place or two. This should not hinder finding a correct solution in any way. The important point here is that the list is essentially (or even actually) complete.
- The property you seek is not in any way strange, nor can it be considered bizarre. After all, I was able to research and compose the list in under an hour.
- You will notice that this list differs from previous lists. Well, properties change. The one glaring error was that Laramie has been left off of recent lists even though it was on early lists (and should have remained).
- Have the answer? I'd like to know. Few have figured it out without significant directed guidance from me. Don't ask for hints, I won't give any.
